Building Bridges Home

“My mother truly feels that this was a beautiful and wonderful experience. I don't have a car and I was worried about how I would get my mom home. It's such a miracle that I was informed about the HAL program. The worker and the driver were very friendly and I was very impressed. I could tell that they were doing this from their hearts.”
– Ludmila K.

Home At Last Benefits

- Provides a less stressful and smooth supported transition from hospital to home
- Achieves timely discharge home from the hospital
- Identifies potential safety issues in the home and follows up
- Achieves more successful recovery at home through community support services
- Improves patient satisfaction with discharge process
- Benefits families by settling and supporting their relative through discharge and linking to relevant community services

The Central East Home At Last program is a free service which can provide help to aging adults and adults with special needs, to settle in at home safely and comfortably in a timely manner after a stay in hospital.

Home At Last is a program funded by the Central East Local Health Integration Network. Home At Last is a partnership between hospitals, community support services providers and the Central East Community Care Access Centre.
